Heavy-Duty Pantera Chassis Braces

$500 each, or $850 for the set

When fitted with modern 17-inch tires or racing slicks, the Pantera's body can suffer from chassis flex. Besides creating vagueness in the handling, repeated chassis flex can crack the paint around the curve of the decklid opening, taillights, and in extreme cases, even break the windshield posts away from the tops of the front fenders!

Other vendors sell light-duty, multi-piece "band-aid" chassis stiffening kits which require you to weld in your finished engine and trunk compartments, and sacrifice front and rear compartment access, without actually addressing the main cause of the problem. Our pieces are substantially larger and stronger and attach DIRECTLY to the chassis, not the body, to eliminate the chassis flex AT THE SOURCE. Designed by one of the most respected race chassis fabricators in California, these braces WILL do the job while remaining essentially invisible. The front brace measures a full five feet long and bolts to mounting pads which must be welded to the underside of the chassis. The rear brace is three feet long and is a direct bolt-in, mounting to the bottom of the engine mounts and the rearmost lower control arm mounts. Satisfaction guaranteed!
